

Students Highlights.....

Students in the community. Tiffany Putney, Mia Eyre, Joseph Putney, and Sara Putney dancing with Mr. Pickles.

CORE/Butte's 3rd-5th grade science/math class created a circuit in their electricity unit that lit up a light bulb. Way to go class!

Let's get excited about some more examples of vocabulary from Debra Moon's 11th & 12th grade English class.....

Moryah German

Through the excerpts we have been reading we are learning a lot. Most of what we have read has been written by my very optimistic writers but my mind is compelling me to tell you some have them have been quite pessimistic as well. The archaic language used in most of them is very common for the genre they came from. The morality shown in these excerpts has made them interesting.

Aurora Manzone

Sara had to write a story for her English class. One of the requirements for the story was that it had to be written in archaic language. In the story that have to have a certain amount of excerpts from their resources. The genre of the story assigned was historical. Once her story was written an the teacher started reading it she was to pessimistic because there was too much morality. The main comment was to be more optimistic.

Student Spotlight: Garrett Konrad - Garrett is a 15 year old sophomore and has been attending CORE since the 5th grade. He recently returned from a Missions Trip which was headed up by his Dad. Garrett and 26 others (mostly adults) traveled to Arusha, Tanzania to build a house for the pastor of a bible college. Garrett thought that the physical work in the hot weather would be a challenge, but it turned out to be beautiful. (See attached photo of him working). He was able to go on safari in two game parks and saw leopards, rhinos, cheetahs and lions. Garrett also toured the town of Mwanza with a local missionary. The meat shops were something he won't soon forget: "the meat was just hanging there with no refrigeration" he said. "It probably would be best to purchase meat early in the day" (yum) This was Garrett's second trip to Tanzania, and preparations are already underway for the next trip. His future plans include a trip to Fiji to help with a medical outreach building. When asked about the rewards of his trip, Garrett said "Making an impression on the Locals: it's easy to be a hero; anything you do over there is magnified, because they have so little". Garrett, we are very proud of You.

Students Highlights.....

Teacher Tom Wernigg

Aimee Abbott & Ruth (math tutor)

A poem from a Chico Center Student, Maggie Hall.

What is your favorite subject???

Some answers from our Nevada City Students.....

Shelby Collins really enjoys her math class.

Hi, my name is Candace Paul. I love my World History class.

Jake Cammarota's favorite subject is his drawing class!

My name is Alondra McClendon. My favorite subject is Earth Science.

Michael Garcia really enjoys reading stories from his English Book.

Jamison Confer is extremely enthusiastic about his English class!

